

Jaume Mensa i Valls, Observations concerning two excerpta from spiritual works by Arnau de Vilanova preserved in Graz, Universitätsbibliothek, Codex 1226

Abstract: Graz, Universitätsbibliothek, Codex 1226 preserves in a sole copy two fragments lacking a title or author's name, and which turn out to be by Arnau de Vilanova. One of these has already been identified by Gerold Fussenegger: it consists in an extract from the Praesentatio facta Burdegaliae. In this article we identify the other: it is an excerptum consisting of various „revelations“ from the Antidotum contra venenum effusum per fratrem Martinum de Athea, of which we provide a critical edition in the Appendix. The study of these two excerpta, by comparing each of them with (a) the text from which it derives and (b) each other, reveals to us certain common features and a common ultimate purpose: namely, the justification of the significance of a number of works copied into the codex (private „revelations“ in one case; the works of Arnau de Vilanova in the other).
